I tears upon thy cheek I see.
Sure thou wilt smile when all are glad,
Nor sadden me to see thee sad.
I love him, and when thou art gone,
With him I shall not be alone. Weep not, my mother! When thou'rt dust, his Heaven and him shall be my trust,— In arms of love he then will shield, When thou no mother's care canst yield.
Weep not, fond mother! Wherefore grieve,
On this my joyful marriage eve? Weepst thou to see my happiness? Oh! rather on me smile and bless, With that kind look I've seen thee wear, E'er since I knew a mother's care. Ohl send me not in grief away— Tears should not stain my bridal day. January 10, 1867. J. V. MARSHALL.

JUBAL A. EARLY.

His Memoirs of the Last Year of the War-Sentiments of one who can neither Forget nor Learn Anything.

Below we give the preface to the book written by General JUBAL A. EARLY, and privately printed for him at Toronto. The title page bears the following:

"A Memoir of the Last Year of the War for Independence in the Confederate States of America, containing an account of the operations of his commands in the years 1864 and 1865, by Lieutenant-General Jubal A. Early, of the Provisional Army of the Confederate States. Dedicated to the memory of the heroic dead who fell fighting for blerty right and instice. "Deo Vindice." Tofor liberty, right and justice. 'Deo Vindice.' To-

The Richmond Enquirer, from which we quote the preface, states that but a limited number of copies were printed, and that none are for sale. PREFACE.

Under a solemn sense of duty to my unhappy country, and to the brave soldiers who fought under me, as well as to myself, the following pages under me, as well as to myself, the following pages have been written:

When the question of practical secession from the United States arose, as a citizen of the State of Virginia, and a member of the Convention called by the authority of the Legislature of that State, I opposed secession with all the ability I possessed, with the hope that the horrors of civil war might be averted, and that a returning sense of duty and justice on the part of the masses of the Northern States would induce them to respect the rights of the people of the South. While some Northern politicians and editors, who subsequently took rank among the most unscrupulous and vindictive of our enemies, and now hold me to be a traitor and rebel, were openly and sedulously justifying and encouraging secession, I was laboring honestly and earnestly to preserve the Union.

As a member of the Virginia Convention, I voted against the Ordinance of Secession on its passage by that body, with the hope that, even then, the collision of arms might be avoided, and some satisfactory adjustment arrived at. The adoption of that ordinance wrung from me bitter teal. of grief; but I at once recognized my duty to abide the decision of my native State, and to defend her soil against invasion. Any scruples which I may have entertained as to the right of secession, were son dispelled by the mad, wicked and unconstitutional measures of the authorities at Washington, and the frenzied clamor of the people of the North I my and ever since have, regarded Abraham Lincoln, his counsellors and supporters, as the real I'm war upon their former breakfen of the South.
I then, and ever since have, regarded Abraham Lincoln, his counsellors and supporters, as the real traitors who had overthrown the Constitution and lovernment of the United S ates, and established i lieu thereof an odious despotism; and this opin-ion I entered on the journal of the Convention when I signed the Ordinance of Secossion. I re-cognized the right of resistance and revolution as exercised by our fathers in 1776, and will hout cavil the military service of my State, willingly, cheerfully and zealously. fully and zealously.

When the State of Virginia became one of the Confederate States, and her troops were turned over to the Confederate Government, I embraced the cause of the whole Confederacy with equal ardor, and continued in the service, with the determination to devite all the energy and talent I mination to devote all the energy and talent I possessed to the common defence. I fought through the entire war without once regretting the course I had pursued, with an abiding faith in e course I had pursued, with the justice of our cause; and I never saw the moment when I would have been willing to consent to any compromise or settlement short of the ab-solute independence of my country.

as to the name by which it was called, I entered

It was my fortune to participate in most of the great military operations in which the army in Virgreat military operations in which the army in Virginia was engaged, both before and after Gen. Lee assumed the command. In the last year of this momentous struggle I commanded, at different times, a division and two corps of Gen. Lee's army in the campaign from the Rapidan to the James River, and subsequently a separate force which marched into Maryland, threatened Washington City and then went through an available amount. City, and then went through an eventful campaign in the Valley of Virginia. No detailed reports of the operations of these different commands were before the close of the war, and the campaign in Maryland and the Valley of Virginia has been the subject of much comment and misapprehen-sion. I have now written a narrative of the operations of all my commands during the closing year of the war, and lay it before the world as a contribution to the history of our great struggle for independence. In giving that narrative, I have made such statements of the positions and strength of the opposing forces in Virginia, and such reference to their general operations as were necessary to enable the reader to understand it; but I do not pretend to detail the operations of other commanders.

I have not found it necessary to be guilty of the injustice of attempting to pull down the reputation of any of my fellow-officers in order to build up my own. My operations and my campaign stand on their own merits, whatever they may be. Nor, in anything I may have found it necessary to the conduct of my troops do I say in regard to the conduct of my troops, do I wish to be understood as in any way decrying the soldiers who constituted the rank and file of my commands. I believe that the world has never roduced a body of men superior in courage, pa-iotism and endurance to the private soldiers of the Confederate armies. I have repeatedly seen these soldiers submit, with cheerfulness, to privations and hardships which would appear to be almost incredible; and the wild cheers of our brave of the Yankees), when their thin lines sent back opposing hosts of Federal troops, stag-gering, reeling and flying, have often thrilled every abre in my heart. I have seen, with my own eyes ragged, barefooted and hungry Confederate sol-diers perform deeds which, if performed in days of yore by mailed warriors in glittering armor, would have inspired the harp of the minstrel and the pen of the poet.

I do no not aspire to the character of a historian, but, having been a witness of and participator in great events, I have given a statement of what I saw and did, for the use of the future historian. Without breaking the thread of my narrative as it proceeds, I have given, in notes, comments on some of the errors and inconsistencies committed by the Commander of the Federal Army, Gen. Grant, and the Federal Secretary of War, Mr. Stanton, in their reports made since the close of the war. Also, some instances of cruelty and barbarity committed by the Federal commanders which were brought to my immediate attention, as well as some other matters of interest.

As was to have been expected, our enemies have flooded the Press with sketches and histories, in which all the appliances of a meretricious literature have been made use of, to glorify their own cause and its supporters, and to blacken ours. But some Southern writers also, who preferred the pen to the sword or musket, have not been able to resist the temptation to rush into print; and, accordincly, carping criticisms have been written by the light of after events, and oven histories of the war attempted by persons who imagined that the dis-tinctness of their vision was enhanced by distance from the scene of conflict, and an exemption from bursting shell. Perhaps other writers of the same class may follow, and various speculations be in-dulged in as to the cause of our disasters. As for myself, I have not undertaken to specula the causes of our failure, as I have seen abundant reason for it in the tremendous odds brought against us. Having had some means of judging, I will, however, say that, in my opinion, both President Davis and Gen. Lee in their respective spheres, were as confident of the success of our lause which it was possible for mortal men to be. cause which it was possible for mortal men to be, and it is a great privilege and comfort for me so to believe, and to have been able to bring with me into exile a profound love and veneration for those

In regard to my own services, all I have to say is, that I have the consciousness of having done my duty to my country, to the very best of my ability, and whatever my fate, I would not exchange that consciousness for untold millions. I have come into exile rather than submit to the yoke of the oppressors of my country; but I have never thought of attributing aught of blame or censure to those true men who, after having nobly took sides with our enemies, and aided in desolating and humiliating the land of their own birth, and of the graves of their ancestors. Some of them rose to high positions in the United States Army, and others to high civil positions. I envy them not their dearly bought prosperity. I had rather be the humblest private soldier who fought in the rather of the Confederate army entry. in the ranks of the Confederate army, and now maimed and disabled, hobbles on his crutches from house to house, to receive his daily bread from house to house, to receive his daily bread from the hands of the grateful women for whose homes he fought, than the highest of those rene-gades and traitors. Let them enjoy the advantages of their present positions as best they may! for the deep and bitter execrations of an entire people now attend them, and an immortality of infamy awaits

As for all the cuemies who have overrun or aided in overrunning my country, there is a wide and impassible gulf between us, in which I see the blood of slaughtered friends, comrades and countrymen, which all the waters in the firmament above and the seas beneath cannot wash away. Those enemies have undertaken to render our cause odious and infamous; and among other atrocities committed by them in the effort to do so, an humble subordinate, poor Wirz, has been selected as a victim to a fiendish spirit, and basely murdered, under an executive edict, founded on the sentence of a vindictive and illegal tr' unal. Let them conthem.

They may employ the infamous Holt, with his "Bureau of Military Justice," to sacrifice other victims on the altars of their hatred, and Provost Marshals and agents of the "Freedmen's Bureau" may riot in all thost license of petty tyranny, but our enemies can no more control the verdict of impartial history than they can escape that doom which awaits them at the final judgment.

During the war slavery was used as the catchword to arouse the passions of a fanatical mob, and to some extent the prejudices of the civilized world were excited against us; but the war was not made on our part for slavery. High dignitaries in both Church and State in Old England, and Puritans in New England, had participated in the profits of a trade, by which the ignorant and barbarous natives of Africa were brought from that country and sold into slavery in the American Colonies. The generation in the Southern States which defended their country in the late war found that country and sold into slavery in the American Colonies. The generation in the Southern States which defended their country in the late war found among them, in a civilized and christianized condition, 4,000,000 of the descendants of those degraded Africans. The Almighty Creator of the Universe had stamped them indelibly with a different color and an inferior mental and physical organization. He had not done this from mere caprice or whim, but for wise purposes. An amalgamation of the races was in contravention of His designs, or He would not have made them so different. The immense number of people could not have been transported back to the wilds from which their ancestors were taken, or wilds from which their ancestors were taken, or they could have been, it would have resulted in their relapse into barbarism. Reason, common sense, true humanity to the black, as well as the safety of the white race, required that the inferior race should be kept in a state of subordination. The condition of domestic slavery, as it existed in the South, had not only resulted in a great improvement in the moral and physical condition of the negro race, but had furnished a class of laborers as happy and contented as any in the world, if not more so. Their labor had not only developed the immense resources of the immediate country in which they were located, but was the main source of the great prosperity of the United States. safety of the white race, required that the inferior in which they were located, but was the main source of the great prosperity of the United States, and farnished the means for the employment of millions of the working classes in other countries. Nevertheless, the struggle made by the people of the South was not for the institution of slavery, but for the inestimable right of self-government, against the domination of a fanatical faction at the North; and slavery was the mere occusion of the development of the antagonism between the two sections. That right of self-government has been lost, and slavery violently abolished. Four millions of blacks have thus been thrown on their wan resources, to starve, to die, and to relapse into barbarism; and inconceivable miseries have been entailed on the white race.

entailed on the white race. The civilized world will find, too late, that its philanthropy has been all false and its religion all wrong on this subject; and the people of the United States will find that, under the pretence of "saving the life of the nation and upholding the old flag," they have surrendered their own liberties into the hands of that worst of all tyrants—a body of senseless funatics. When the passions and infatuations of the day

When the passions and infatuations of the day shall have been dissipated by time, and all the results of the late war shall have passed into irrevocable history, the future chronicler of that history will have a most important duty to perform, and posterity, while pouring over its pages, will be lost in wonder at the follies and crimes committed in this generation. in this generation.

My narrative is now given to the public, and the sole merit I claim for it is that of truthfulness. In writing it I have received material aid from an accurate diary kept by Lieut. William W. Old, Aid to Major-General Edward Johnson, who was with me during the campaign in Maryland and the Shenandosh Valley, until the 12th of August, 1864, and the copious notes of Captain J. Hotchkies, who acted as Topographical Engineer for the Second Corps and the Army of the Valley District, and recorded the events of each day, from the opening of the campaign on the Rapidan in May, 1864, until the affair at Waynesboro, in March, 1865.

The following startling and emphatic statement can be seen at our office. Letter of Rev. E. P. GRAME, Chaplain of the 107th New York Regiment: NEAR ACQUIA CREEK, March 4th, 1863. Owingito the great exposure and terrible decompo tion after the battle of Antietam, I was utterly prostratcine. An article called Plantation Bitters, prepared by Dr. DRAKE, of New York, was prescribed to give me strength and an appetite. To my great surprise they gave me immediate relief. Two bottles almost allowed me to join my regiment. * * * I have since seen them used in many cases, and am free to say, for hospital or private purposes I know of nothing like them.

Rev. R. F. GRANE, Chaplain, Letter from the Rev. N. E. GILDS, St. Clairsville, Pa GENTLIMEN:-You were kind enough, on a former ocasion, to send me a half dozzen bottles of Plantation Bitters for $3.50. My wife having derived so much benefit from the use of these Bitters, I desire .er to continue them, and you will please send - ary bottle more for the money enclosed.

I am, very truly, yo'rs, N. E. GLLUS, Pastor Ger. Ref. Church, SOLDIERS' HOME, SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE, OINCINNATI, OHIO, Jan. 15th, 1938.

I have given your Plantation Bitters to hundreds of our noble soldiers who stop here, more or less disabled from various causes, and the effect is marvellous and Such a preparation as this is I heartily wish in ever amily, in every hospital, and at hand on every hattle G. W. D. ANDREWS, Superintendent.

Dr. W. A. CHILDS, Surgeon of the Tenth Vermont Reiment, writes:-"I wish every soldier had a bottle of Plantation Ritters. They are the most effective, perfect, and harmless tonic I ever used," WASHINGTON, D. C., May 22d, 1863.
